Special flight brings out newsman evacuee

Editor's Note: Associated Press Cambodian staffer Chhay-born Lay missed the U.S. Marine evacuation of Phnom Penh and filed this dramatic message to the AP bureau in Saigon: "I still here and don't know what to do next." The AP sent in a chartered plane and picked up Lay and his family at the deserted Phnom Penh airport. They were the last evacuees from the beleaguered Cambodian capital.

By CHHAY BORN LAY
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP)—I knew I was in trouble when an American friend who is remaining in Phnom Penh rushed into the AP office and screamed, "What are you doing here? Everyone's left." I had been two hours at the immigration department picking up a passport for my wife. In that time everyone had left. I rushed out of Le Phnom hotel where the office is to see if there were any choppers landing.

There was no sign of any helicopters. I dashed back into the office, rounded up my wife and two children, hopped in the office car and drove like crazy for the American Embassy. It was deserted except for a handful of Cambodian guards. I asked a guard: "Where are the other newsmen?" "They've all left," he replied. "You better get to the heli-pad quickly." I drove around the back of the embassy, but there was a barricade blocking the street. There were two marine helicopters on the pad.

American Embassy personnel were jumping aboard, the chopper's rotors were still turning and U.S. Marines were keeping a crowd of Cambodians back.

I asked a policeman to let me through. He said no.

The policeman looked very tense and was carrying an M16. I argued with him, he pointed the gun at me and pushed me back.

The children were scared and crying.

I drove back to the office to see if there were any messages about a charter that had been standing by in Saigon. There was a message waiting, saying the charter was on its way.

A second chance, I thought. I went back to the office to try and phone Saigon. I'd only been there a few minutes when the phone rang. It was George Esper, AP's bureau chief in Saigon: "The charter is on its way. Dick Blystone is aboard. Get out to the airport immediately."

Restrictions put on C5 flights

WASHINGTON (AP)—All the Air Force's controversial C5 transport plane will be operating under restrictions as a result of last week's air tragedy involving a plane carrying Vietnamese orphans.

The Air Force announced the restrictions Friday "as a precautionary measure ... to assure safe operation of the fleet" pending results of an investigation of the crash.

The restrictions include a prohibition on passengers and were imposed one week after the C5 crash in South Vietnam. More than 200 persons were killed, making it one of the worst aircraft disasters on record.

Besides the restrictions, "a wide-ranging C5 systems review has been initiated to include re-examination of all operational, material and support factors that could lead to C5s."

The C5, almost from the time the program began a decade ago, has been the subject of controversy, principally because of its cost. The per-plane price has soared over the years and is now listed by the Air Force at $54 million.

The plane went into operation in June 1970. One plane was destroyed in a non-fatal crash-landing last September in Oklahoma.

The restrictions imposed on the aircraft include limiting flights in areas of air turbulence, limiting operations on rough runways and eliminating use of the aft cargo door system.

The Air Force said Friday that the C5 is not unsafe. "Just as with any mishap, we want to find out what happened," a

We jumped in the car and headed for the airport. It took us 10 minutes for a trip that normally takes 20 minutes.

The airport terminal was deserted. I could see a plane about 200 yards away, its engines running, but I didn't know if it was the charter.

I put the children in a sand-bagged bunker near the control tower and stood around wondering what to do. Suddenly Dick Blystone ran up and shouted: "Lay, we've been looking for you. Where's your family?"

He grabbed one child, I grabbed another and we all ran to the plane.

As soon as we scrambled aboard the plane it started rolling. We were so exhausted we collapsed on the seat and we were airborne before I got my breath back.

I looked out the window at the city and thought: "Goodbye, Cambodia."

spokesman said. "Until we do, we are taking certain precautions."

No report on the crash has been released and the final death toll has not been calculated because experts are still examining the remains.

Military sources said the day of the crash that there was a possibility sabotage may have been involved, but that was discounted by the U.S. Embassy in Saigon.

Reports at the time of the crash said the rear cargo door of the plane blew out and there was "explosive decompression." The pilot lost a number of controls and tried to land the plane at Saigon's Tan Son Nhut air base, but the aircraft crashed.

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP)—The United States closed its embassy in Phnom Penh today and evacuated Americans and some Cambodians, including Acting President Sau Kham Khoy, in a helicopter airlift protected by heavily armed U.S. Marines.

The evacuation, code-named "Operation Earle Pull" and ordered by President Ford as the Khmer Rouge closed to within one mile of the Phnom Penh airport, signaled American abandonment of Cambodia to the Communist-led insurgents.

The city remained calm after the departure of the 276 evacuees, but virtually everything left behind by the embassy was looted, including staff cars that took Americans to helicopters. Fighting was reported on the northwestern defense line.

Premier Long Boret criticized Sau Kham Khoy in a radio broadcast, saying his departure showed the acting president was lacking as a leader. Long Boret announced that a provisional high committee had been set up to rule the country and that Sau Kham Khoy was no longer recognized as acting president.

A representative of Prince Norodom Sihanouk, titular leader of the rebels, said in Paris "there will be no blood bath" when the rebels reach the city, but he said those Cambodian leaders on the Khmer Rouge death list will be punished. Chau Seng said the Khmer Rouge will practice a policy of "broad national union."

The two-hour evacuation began shortly before 9 a.m. local time, when about 360 armed Marines flew to the U.S. Embassy aboard helicopters.

A total of 24 helicopters eventually flew in from the USS Okinawa and the USS Hancock, both standing off the coast of Cambodia, and the U.S. airbase at Utapao, Thailand.

American warplanes from the Okinawa flew overhead as the Marines arrived and the helicopters were loaded for the 75-minute flight to the Okinawa. After everyone was aboard ship, the Okinawa steamed toward Thailand.

About a dozen rockets hit Phnom Penh after the evacuation, most of them aimed at the grassy area where the helicopters had landed. Two Cambodian civilians were killed.

The Americans who stayed behind included Sydney Schanberg of the New York Times; Al Rockoff, a freelance photographer; Douglas Sapper, an employee of a small private airline; and Richard Boyle, foreign editor of the Pacific News Service.

A number of French, Italian and Swedish journalists also remained, along with a French community estimated at several hundred.

Those evacuated included 82

Americans, 159 Cambodians and small numbers of other nationalities, a Pentagon spokesman said in Washington.

In Honolulu, Adm. Noel Gayler, commander of U.S. forces in the Pacific, said the operation was successfully completed "without so much as a stubbed toe."

In South Vietnam, the Saigon military command reported more heavy fighting around Ben Thanh, about 30 miles southwest of Saigon, and at Xuan Loc, 40 miles east of Saigon.

Both locations were being watched closely for signs of the beginning of a drive on Saigon itself.

In Cambodia, the U.S. airlift of rice and ammunition into Phnom Penh was suspended and officials said they doubted it would be resumed.

The decision to close the embassy and evacuate all Americans was made Thursday but not implemented until Friday, in an attempt to make the movement as quietly and orderly as possible.

Military analysts in Washington predicted the Cambodian capital would fall in several days.

The show of American military might apparently was arranged more to offset any attempt at reprisals by the Cambodian allies than by the insurgents, but those fears proved unjustified.

In a statement issued after the evacuation, Ford said, "I decided with a heavy heart on the evacuation of American personnel from Cambodia because of my responsibility for the safety of the Americans who have served there so valiantly."

Ford said the Cambodians who were evacuated were those "whose lives would have been jeopardized if they had remained."

Ford ordered pullout 'with heavy heart'

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Ford, again criticizing Congress for not voting additional aid for Cambodia, said today he ordered the evacuation of Americans from that nation "with a heavy heart."

"I sincerely regret that there was not timely action on my request to the Congress to enable the United States to continue to provide the assistance necessary to the survival of the government of the Khmer Republic," Ford said.

Meanwhile, the President pressed his requests for expanded military and economic aid to South Vietnam.

In a statement issued early today, after the closing of the American embassy in Cambodia and evacuation of American citizens, Ford said:

"I decided with a heavy heart on the evacuation of American personnel from Cambodia because of my responsibility for the safety of the Americans who have served there so valiantly."

"Despite that evacuation, we will continue to do whatever possible to support an independent, peaceful, neutral and unified Cambodia."

He said he took the action "in view of the seriously deteriorating military situation around the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh, and on the basis of the recommendations of the American ambassador to the Khmer Republic."

On Friday night, Ford sent to Congress three bills containing the requests for expanded aid to South Vietnam that he had voiced in his State of the World speech to Congress Thursday night.

In accompanying letters to Senate and House leaders, he wrote, "I urge the immediate consideration and enactment of these measures."

Ford is seeking $972 million in extra military and economic aid for South Vietnam. Members continued to express doubt that Congress will approve Ford's request for military aid. "I'm dubious that we have the votes to get anything (in military aid), frankly," said House Republican Leader John J. Rhodes, a close ally of Ford.

In Paris, the Viet Cong delegation condemned the President's request as "criminal and against the interests of the American people."

Ford also asked Congress for a clarification of his authority to use U.S. troops if "humanitarian evacuation" becomes necessary in South Vietnam.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Ford should order Americans out of South Vietnam now "while there is still time to do so without the use of force."

The foreign minister of the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government, Mme. Nguyen Thi Binh, said her government would help evacuate American personnel from South Vietnam if asked.

Haylift begins to feed cattle trapped by Montana blizzard

HELENA, Mont. (AP)—An emergency haylift to snow-stranded cattle in north-central Montana may have come too late for as many as 33,000 newborn calves trapped by a raging three-day blizzard.

"There's no doubt there's going to be heavy losses," said Leo Kolstad, regional chairman of U.S. Department of Agriculture's emergency board.

Kolstad inspected some blizzard-stricken areas Friday, then called superiors in Washington, D.C., and requested broad discretionary authority to designate as many as nine counties as disaster livestock feed areas.

"The state's in a very critical position as far as adequate supply of feed for cattle," Kolstad said. "The most serious problem is ranchers who can't get out to check and don't know."

Gov. Thomas L. Judge declared a state of emergency on Thursday as the storm subsided and ordered nine Army National Guard helicopters to begin a 48-hour airlift of hay and oats to livestock trapped in outlying pastures.

A full grown cow consumes 30 pounds of feed per day. Most stockmen provide supplemental feed on an every-other-day basis.

Col. A. J. Christiansen termed the operation a success, but Kolstad said as many as 20 percent of the area's estimated 161,420 newborn calves may not have survived the two-foot snowfall, towering drifts and freezing winds.

"If a cow and calf are out in the storm, the calf will have a tendency to lie down," Kolstad said. "The mother will stay, they get drifted in and then they're too weak to fight."

Spring calving and lambing were about 65 per cent complete in the area raked by snow and up to 50 mile-an-hour winds from Monday to Wednesday.

It was the fourth major storm since the first day of spring, March 21, and stockmen in this heavily agricultural state already have reported widespread outbreaks of pneumonia and intestinal flu among their herds.

A rancher in the northern Montana town of Galata reported he was unable to spot any of his estimated 900 cattle Thursday night after searching broad areas by bulldozer.

Kolstad said his office had received reports that a 250,000-acre grazing range near Harlowton in central Montana was totally inaccessible. He expressed optimism that plow crews could break open some access roads before Monday.

Glacier, Liberty and Toole counties in the north were declared disaster feed areas last fall due to drought conditions, and those counties will continue to be eligible for free delivery of federal low-cost feed until May 31, Kolstad said.

He said he may recommend disaster designation for six other counties after examining field reports from other USDA officials.

Says Onassis had decided to divorce Jackie

NEW YORK (AP)—Aristotle Onassis decided to divorce his wife, Jacqueline, shortly before his death last March and asked a lawyer to start proceedings, the New York Times reported in today's editions.

The newspaper said that Mrs. Onassis, also the widow of the late President John F. Kennedy, receives a bequest of only $3 million in the Onassis will, a sum far less than published reports had indicated.

Quoting friends of the Onassis family, the article said the Greek shipping magnate's will stipulated that trust funds of $1 million each be set up for Mrs. Onassis' children, Caroline and John.

It said they will receive incomes from the funds until they are 21. Previous reports had placed their inheritance as high as $15 million each.

The Times said that last Dec. 3, John Meyer, a close associate of Onassis, called lawyer Roy M. Cohn and said that Onassis wanted him to be his attorney in a divorce action against Mrs. Onassis.

"He called me when Mr.

Onassis was with him," the Times quoted Cohn as saying Friday. "He said it was absolutely definite, and that Mr. Onassis wanted to end the marriage."

Meyer declined comment on the phone call, the Times said. The newspaper quoted several friends of the Onassis family as saying that Onassis' daughter Christina by his first marriage, was instrumental in persuading her father to seek a divorce.

Onassis was suffering from the muscular disease myasthenia gravis and the newspaper reported friends saying that it was poor health rather than a reconciliation with Mrs. Onassis that led Onassis to drop the divorce action.

Rumors of a divorce between the couple dated back to 1970 but both always denied it.

Some estimates had placed Mrs. Onassis' inheritance as up to $200 million. Onassis' wealth was estimated as high as $500 million.

Mrs. Onassis is entitled to one-eighth of her husband's estate under Greek law, but according to the Times, experts say that much of his wealth from some 100 interlocking companies was kept in trust and he could have written his will so that she would receive much less.

Mrs. Onassis was not immediately available for comment.

Man arrested, tavern closed

An Amboy bartender was arrested and the tavern he worked at ordered closed Friday.

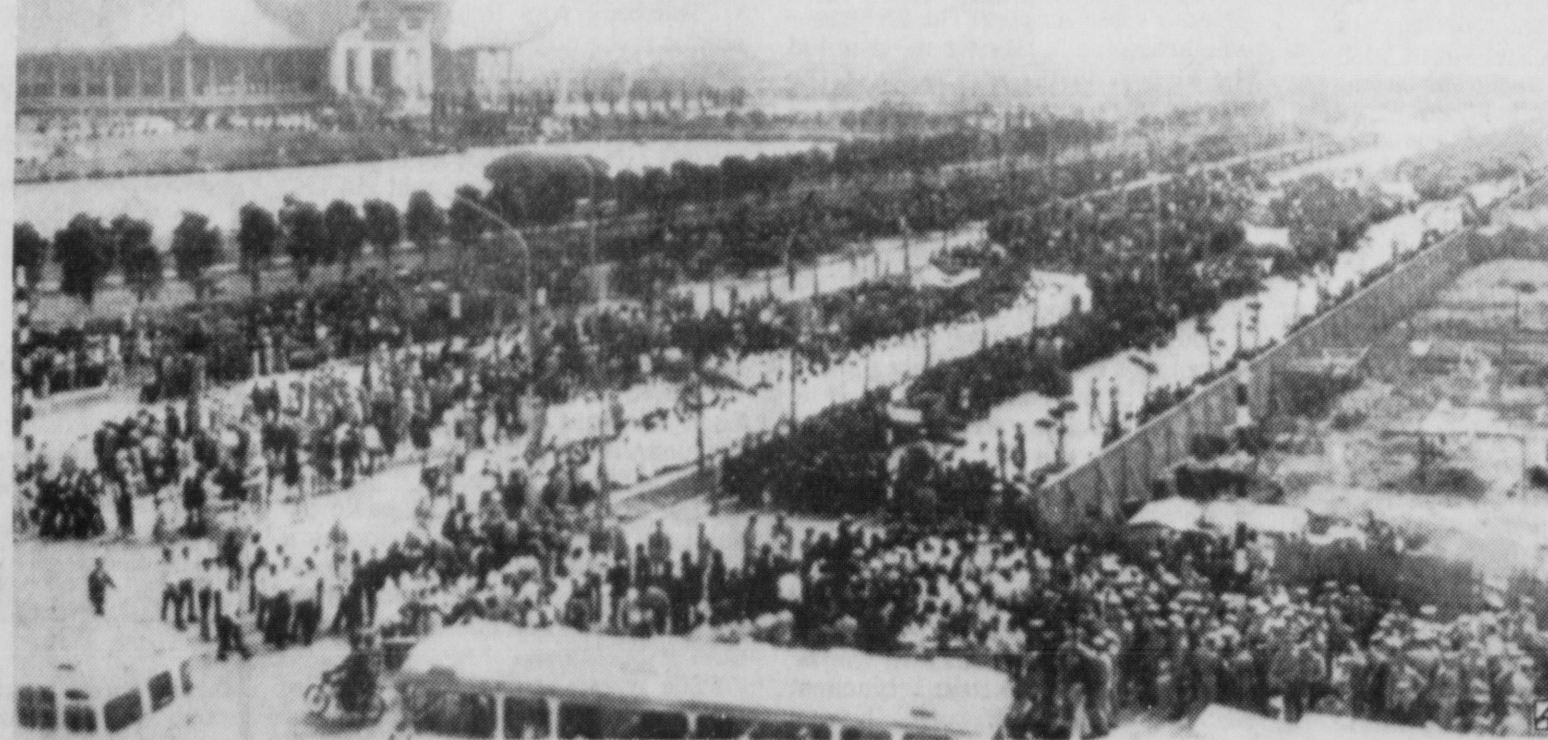

Thomas Heath, 31, was charged by Lee County Sheriff's Deputies with delivering alcoholic liquor to a minor after a youth claimed he purchased liquor at the Dog House Tavern.

Mayor Kenneth McCracken ordered the bar closed for an indefinite time as a result of the charge. Heath was brought to the Law Enforcement Center where he was released on bond and scheduled to appear in court April 24.

Lowell Park opening delayed

Lowell Park, which was scheduled to open Sunday, will remain closed until April 20, Park Supt. Lloyd Swan said today.

The park has not dried out sufficiently to allow its use by the public, Swan said.

Thoughts on face of the President

By TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON (NEA)—A decision by the U.S. Postal Service to henceforth prohibit the hanging of presidential photographs in post office lobbies has provoked at least one easily rattled congressman to proclaim it as downgrading of the presidency.

My view is otherwise, seeing the postal order as a step away from banana republicanism, and convinced that after Richard Nixon there is nothing imaginable that could further downgrade the presidency.

Whatever the merits of the small controversy, however, it serves to remind me of a related, and I think, informative incident that occurred in the last decade during the Vietnam war. I don't recall the names involved in the matter but the moral of it remains vivid.

It was early in the conflict. The mid 1960s. The American force was still comparatively small, the few homefront war dissenters were still called peaceniks, the men of the battle were still for the most part resigned to their fate and only rarely considered the larger implications of it.

It was winter. The temperatures in the 80s. The troops called Vietnam "Suntan Strip." It was a time, if I remember right, almost of innocence.

It was also a time of killing, and much of it centered northwest of Saigon in a region occupied by the 173rd Airborne Brigade. These men, originally brought from the Philippines for the three months temporary duty, were by now permanently assigned.

Indeed, in these early days, the airborne troops suffered the highest combat and casualty rate in the war zone. One company lost four captains in a year's time, and its overall casualty count in the same period was between 60 and 80 per cent. Few American soldiers have ever fought so much for so long for so little.

I recorded many of the unit's war stories at the time. It was the first unit to have a black Medal of Honor winner, the first unit to order a lifetime subscription to Playboy magazine and receive an inauguration copy from a centerfold bunny. It was also the first unit, I believe, to award a silver star to a commanding general for doing nothing more than flying over a battle in a helicopter.

Despite my present views on the Vietnam protraction, I have never been so proud of any Americans as I was of most of these good men. God help us, I wonder where that innocence has gone.

In retrospect, I suppose the chastity was beginning to fade when one member of the 173rd, call him Private Smith, received a long-requested autographed picture of President Lyndon Johnson, and another member of the unit, call him Private Jones, used the occasion for fun. Smith and Jones were pals, they came from the same town, went to the same school, occupied the same hootch—but where Smith was a conformist, Jones was something else.

Very proud of his LBJ picture, Private Smith hung it in the hootch, only to find after a few days Private Jones had decorated it with horns.

At first Smith merely erased the pencil marks, telling Jones to lay off. But Jones, getting a rise from his establishment friend, repeated the horns. It went on like this for a month—Jones drawing the horns at night, Smith removing them in the morning—until the latter lost control of reason. Smith tore the photo down, put it in his bag, and told Jones he was moving from the hootch. He didn't move, but though Jones apologized and tried to smooth it, Smith didn't make up either. The two friends did not talk for many weeks.

No doubt the feud would have ended eventually. But before it could, Private Jones was killed on patrol. He stepped on a mine. The sergeant who informed Smith said the young man's face turned red at the news, his eyes filmed over and his hands began to shake.

Some time later he went to his hootch, took the LBJ photograph from his bag—then marked it with horns and a moustache. He hung it up thus, in memory of his friend, and there it remained until Private Smith, too, was killed a few months after.

By RONALD REAGAN
(Copley News Service)

Most Americans are conservationists and environmentalists to some extent. Few want to see our scenic wonders spoiled, our waters polluted, our natural resources wasted.

Yet, from time to time, some environmentalists go overboard in efforts to protect a view, preserve a recreational area or save the natural habitat of the native American mosquito.

Take, for instance, the case of the Trident base at Bangor, Wash.

Trident is the follow-on to the Polaris and Poseidon missile systems.

Basically, it consists of a multi-warhead, 4,000-mile (eventually 6,000-mile) missile launched from a nuclear submarine cruising beneath the surface of the ocean.

The Navy Department declares that a Trident base must be located in the Pacific because it

A case of conservationists going overboard to preserve nature

"gives the Soviets another whole ocean to worry about." It goes on to say that strategically there is no alternative in the Pacific to the Bangor location.

For most Americans that would be enough. Few would object to construction of a desperately needed national defense base anywhere, especially when every effort is made (as it is in the case of Trident) to minimize its impact on the surrounding environment. And especially, also, when such a base will provide much-needed jobs in a state where joblessness is high.

Yet, an organization called Concerned About Trident (CAT) has been formed specifically for the purpose of halting construction of the Trident base on the grounds that the Navy has failed to comply with the National Environmental Policy Act.

To this end CAT has brought suit in federal court. Its avowed aim is to preserve the pristine beauty of the Bangor area at all costs, including the defense of the United States.

Well, fortunately, it looks as if CAT is not going to be successful. A major reason is the involvement in the suit on the side of the Navy of a small, relatively new public interest law firm, the Pacific Legal Foundation (PLF).

PLF has made some devastating points against CAT. Among them are these:

1. That CAT is merely a corporate shell founded solely for the purpose of stopping in the courts the construction of the base.
2. That the actual people behind the suit have yet to be disclosed.
3. That undisclosed persons or organizations are funding the suit "by laundering funds to plaintiffs' attorneys through various tax exempt charitable organizations in possible violation of Internal Revenue Service guidelines."
4. That there are serious legal questions regarding CAT's right to sue.

Although the suit is still in the courts, federal Judge George L. Hart has already denied a motion for a preliminary injunction to stop construction, largely on points made by PLF.

PLF lawyers are now confident of final victory for the Navy. This, alone, will be good enough reason to cheer for Americans who worry, with much justification, that America is falling behind the Soviet Union in defense capabilities.

Another good reason is the discovery that at least one public interest law firm is working on behalf of the public instead of, as so often is the case with such firms, working for left-wing special interest groups at the expense of the public.

I will come back to the subject of the Pacific Legal Foundation in other columns. It is chalking up quite a record.

It's the Thought That Counts!

Spain staggered by corruption

MADRID (LENS)—"Move that filth out of your window!" barked the policeman.

The girl in the bookshop gasped. "But it's a reproduction of Goya's 'Maja Desnuda.'"

"Don't talk to me about reproduction," snarled the policeman, "just remove that pornography."

This brief encounter between art and the law occurred in Caceres recently. The city is now divided between supporters and critics of the policeman. Even in sophisticated quarters of Madrid and Barcelona he has some admirers.

Puritanism is still strong in Spain and many Spaniards feel queasy over the upsurge of permissiveness. The policeman's critics complain that the authorities spend too much time on fussing about moral appearances and too little on combating serious crime and corruption: the might of the law is mobilized to gag irreverent journalists, but well-connected figures associated with major scandals are rarely inconvenienced. Both sides denounce what they see as a rising tide to corruption.

A leading Barcelona daily, supported by the president of the consumers' association, has alleged that there is more fraud in the food industry in Spain than anywhere else in Western Europe. Thousands of members of the new middle class have lost their savings in the collapse of will-o'-the-wisp property investments: the president of one firm that sold fictitious flats was, appropriately, the former head of the "dirty tricks" department of one of the regime's secret services.

Even the football industry is writhing as clubs accuse each other of recruiting foreign players and "naturalizing" them with the aid of forged birth certificates.

The police dislike terms like "crime wave." They say that robbery, theft and most "crimes against modesty and decency" have reached a plateau, after increasing sharply in the late 1960s. They are, however, concerned about problems new to Spain such as drug trafficking and juvenile delinquency. They secured just over 2,000 convictions for drug offenses last year, six times more than in 1968. Back in 1955 five Spaniards in 1,000 were alcoholics; today 70 per 1,000 are.

Foreign tourists are blamed for introducing the drug problem, and excessive liquor advertising on television is said to be making hard drinking respectable. The authorities are themselves promoting alcoholism and delinquency among young people by their failure to provide playgrounds in Spain's fast-expanding cities. Middle-class and working-class families alike are cooped up in tall blocks of flats, and their children's only play-spaces are usually streets and bars.

Destructiveness is rife: hallways and elevators of new apartment blocks are speedily vandalized—by the children of the same hard-pressed families that have mortgaged themselves up to the ears in order to buy flats there.

In the financial world, bank raids constitute the leading growth sector, with the Basque separatists and anarchists who used to dominate it outnumbered nowadays by freelance commercial operators. The authorities are pressing banks to invest in security measures (mainly armed guards and electronic gadgets) which, bankers moan, are more expensive than the occasional hold-up.

Crimes against the internal security of the state (which may range from saying something unkind about the Caudillo to blowing up his prime minister) are also becoming more numerous; last year about 7,000 people were convicted under this heading.

The chief prosecutor's latest annual report observes that homosexuality, and in particular male prostitution, has increased recently "because of lack of religious sentiment and culture, and inadequate financial resources." The same report records, just above the juvenile delinquency figures, that about 800,000 Spanish women use the pill and that an estimated 300,000 abortions are performed annually.

Both contraception and abortion are still illegal in Spain, and the fact that such figures are included in crime statistics is a reminder that the country is still some distance away from what other Europeans would recognize as a permissive society.

Things Dixon Talked About

25 YEARS AGO

The first step in a three-year program to improve the lighting of Dixon streets for the safety of motorists and pedestrians alike has been completed with the installation of 6,000-lumen lamps on the highway streets through town.

All volunteer car workers for the annual drive for funds in Lee County will meet Saturday afternoon at 1:30 at the Loveland Community House. The purpose of the meeting is to instruct the group about the actual work of the American Cancer Society.

50 YEARS AGO

W. D. Baum of this city was awarded the general contract for the construction of the nurses home in connection with the Dixon Public Hospital.

The perfect spring weather of Easter—the finest in many, many years—furnished ideal circumstances for the great spring festival, and enabled the display of the new gowns and millinery creations in this city.

Atlanta's surge of success on trial

ATLANTA (LENS)—Early risers in Atlanta's Marriott Motor Hotel sometimes come down to the dining room to find the city's corpulent mayor already shovelling down a generous breakfast before setting off for a hard day's work at city hall. Fourteen months after taking office as the first black mayor of a major southern city, Maynard Jackson's appetite for bacon and eggs and grits is considerably heartier than his popularity among the citizens of Atlanta.

A couple of years ago it was toasted as "the world's next great city"; today Atlanta is grappling with the problems of rapid expansion hotly followed by rapid recession, and the mayor is getting the blame for the way the fight is going.

The grumbles and accusations have recently become so intense that they have threatened to shatter the self-confidence and strong sense of civic pride that have incubated Atlanta's lusty growth.

The city's success in recent years had become legendary, and the legend nurtured greater success. Atlanta's early role as center of transport blossomed in the 1960s and early 1970s.

Its airport became the second busiest in the United States, offering excellent communications to all parts of the country, and so helping to bring prosperity to the city. With prosperity came the offices of most major American companies, whose employees were drawn too by the exciting architecture of the city center and the pleasantly wooded character of the residential areas. A baseball team that included Hank Aaron, the game's greatest practitioner and a fine symphony orchestra were additional attractions.

But probably the main factor in Atlanta's astonishing growth was its history of harmonious race relations. The existence of a group of black colleges, including Morehouse and Atlanta University had enabled blacks to climb the educational ladder more easily than in other parts of the South. Once educated, they found it easier to get jobs, if not in the South then elsewhere.

The resulting lack of tension was reinforced by the attitudes of a far-sighted newspaper editor, Ralph McGill, an unusually liberal chief of police, Herbert Jenkins, and a succession of progressive mayors. One of these, William Hartsfield, described Atlanta as a city "too busy to hate," a slogan which held the key to Atlanta's success, for those who ran the city were businessmen who realized that race riots were bad for business.

In 1969, however, control of the mayor's office slipped from the business community with the election of Sam Massell, a Jewish liberal who built a coalition of white and black voters to defeat the businessmen's candidate.

At the same time it became clear that the racial composition of the city was changing rapidly. By 1973 the city's registered voters were evenly divided between the races, and as deputy mayor, the 35-year-old Jackson had little difficulty in winning that year's mayoral election.

He did so with the support not just of the black community but also of many white liberals and white businessmen. But in the past year he has antagonized almost all of them.

The first of Jackson's plans to go wrong was a bungled attempt to sack the police chief, John Inman, who was considered racist. Having given him his notice, it emerged that the mayor had no power to do so. Ignominiously, Jackson could only superimpose a "public safety commissioner" above Inman's head.

This job went to Reginald Eaves, an old college friend of the mayor, and just one of the boys for whom Jackson is said to be providing jobs. (Eaves' reputation has not been enhanced by the recent disclosure that his former executive secretary, now suspended, had an extensive criminal record, including arrests for the possession of heroin.)

More serious are the charges that the mayor is either hostile or indifferent to the cares of the business community. These charges were made most forcefully in the autumn when a group of businessmen and property owners called Central Atlanta Progress wrote to Jackson giving warning that some firms were contemplating leaving the city center because of worries about crime and racial tension and the "perceived attitude of the mayor as anti-white."

Since then both the mayor and the chamber of commerce have gone out of their way to assure everyone that everything is just fine, and that no division between them exists. Ivan Allen, president of the chamber of commerce, recently said that "Atlanta's business community is committed to the continued strength of the central core, more than is true in any other city in America. The business community has no intention of deserting Atlanta."

If such statements are true, why are they being made? The answer is that the mayor and the chamber of commerce have had their differences and some companies have taken fright, the airlines, for instance. The mayor had an extensive wrangle last year over the siting of Atlanta's new airport. The airlines—who are going to pay for it—wanted the airport to the northwest of the city, to be relatively near most of its users, who live in the northern suburbs; the mayor preferred a site in Henry County to the southeast, where he wants to encourage development. In the end the mayor backed down, but only at some cost in terms of goodwill.

Jackson could better afford such skirmishes if he had not antagonized so many of his constituents or if he had the wholehearted support of the city council. But the recession has hit the South harder than most parts of the country, and has handicapped him in improving the city's public services. He has undoubtedly disappointed many of those who voted for him.

Jackson is still, in his own words, "the youngest, fattest, blackest mayor in Atlanta's history"; he can still engender awe and admiration with his silver-tongued oratory, and he can still display a sense of humor by clambering into the boxing ring with Muhammad Ali, as he did two months ago in order to promote black business in Atlanta. But for a nice guy with good intentions he seems to have lost a lot of friends in just one year.

Many of the charges against him are unreasonable. It is certainly true that he has been administratively unpolished and politically inept. But he has made some useful innovations in city government, such as setting aside one day each month when anyone may come and talk to him in city hall, and many if not all of his appointments have been good ones. And he has committed no single heinous mistake. His errors have been those of inexperience and over-ambition.

He has also had bad luck in taking office just as the recession gathered speed, affecting, as it has done, the building and tourist trades, both of which are important to Atlanta.

Even so, nearly $400 million worth of construction is going ahead, including the $35-million World Congress Center and a 74-story hotel on Peachtree Street.

The only way this could all go sour is if the city loses its precarious self-confidence and succumbs to internecine warfare. That is now the danger.

The city was 38 per cent black in 1960; today it is 55 per cent. In 1960 its schools were 48 per cent black; today they are 86 per cent. The murder rate is higher than Ulster's, and though most crimes are committed by black against black, the whites are leaving for the relative safety of the suburbs in disturbing numbers. Such statistics suggest a pattern of development all too like that of so many northern cities.

The city maintains its basic assets: its geographical position as a communications center, its untroubled racial character and an atmosphere as effervescent as the Coca-Cola it produces.

The worry is that these will be dissipated if the political power of the blacks and the economic power of the whites cannot be coupled to get Atlanta through a period of recession.

The Doctor Says:

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — Last year I was hospitalized for tests, and they showed I have a disease called sarcoidosis. I have been on Prednisone for months.

The other day I went for another chest X ray, and the doctor said it was clear, I can start to decrease the Prednisone and hopefully this condition will stay dormant. I am still experiencing tightening in my chest and have frequent heart pains. This condition also brought out arthritis in my legs and hands.

May I also say I gave up smoking nine months ago when this disease was discovered. I'm 30 and have never been sick a day in my life.

I want to know any information on this disease. I heard it is rare. What will happen if it recurs? And, is it in any way related to cancer?

DEAR READER — Sarcoid is one of those diseases that we have not solved. No one knows what causes it. It is commonly found on routine chest X rays for the first time, often in people who have no symptoms at all and thought they were perfectly healthy.

The disease causes little lump-like formations which can be fairly large in size. Doctors call these granulomas. The little lumps most commonly form in the lungs. And they may not interfere with lung function.

These lump-like formations may disappear in one part of the body and show up in another area. They can involve any part of the body, although the lung is the most common location.

Sarcoid has been confused with tuberculosis, which it is not. It is not cancer. We know a lot more about what it is not than what it is.

In a large number of cases the disease never causes any symptoms at all and just disappears. About 10 to 20 per cent of the patients do develop arthritis while the disease is active, and if there is not too much damage it may leave no permanent ill effects.

Only about five per cent of patients with the disease actually die from it, which is pretty remarkable when you realize how much it can involve and how little we know about treating it.

The corticosterone medicines like Prednisone are commonly used in patients with extensive involvement or complications.

The biggest danger really is too much lung damage, so it was a good thing you quit smoking.

Many patients do have a relapse after treatment with cortisone. But the relapse is usually much milder and of shorter duration. So you should be through the worst of it and can look forward to less problems and eventually a complete cure. In most cases the disease lasts less than two years.

Muscles, including the heart, can be involved, but I would not be so easily convinced that any chest pain you have is from your heart without other information. The liver too can be involved, but can recover.

Tracking devices put into fish

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Like James Bond, fisheries experts southeast of here are using surgically implanted radio tracking devices in their work.

But they're not tracking secret agents; their target is fish. The experts are trying to determine the effects of hot water discharge on fish populations.

And to do it they've implanted the tracking devices in about a dozen largemouth bass in Lake Sangchris, a manmade lake built by Commonwealth Edison, which uses the water to cool its generators.

"In unheated lakes, largemouth bass generally stay in one place if their needs are satisfied," said Dr. John Tranquilli, a fisheries specialist with the Illinois Natural History Survey. "However, we are finding that bass migrate readily in Lake Sangchris, searching for temperatures that are to their preference."

One of the bass has emerged as a real traveler, logging more than 31 miles since the study began last spring. Other fish have moved shorter distances, always toward optimum water temperatures.

The research is being conducted by Dr. Tranquilli and two other fisheries specialists with the Survey. It is part of a four year program to determine what factors make a hot water impoundment different from a regular lake.

The program is financed by a grant from Commonwealth Edison, which has also turned over property surrounding the lake to the state for use as a park.

After being fitted with radio devices, the fish were released at a half dozen locations in the lake.

They are tracked three days a week, and their locations recorded. In colder months they have moved in the direction of the hot water discharge. Summer sends them swimming into colder portions of the lake.

..... for and about women

Miss Henrich weds Robert Ernst

SUBLETTE — Miss Rose Mary Henrich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Henrich Jr., West Brooklyn, and Robert D. Ernst, son of Mrs. John L. Ernst, Buffalo, N.Y., and the late Mr. Ernst, exchanged marriage vows March 29 in the Sublette Union Church.

The Rev. John Duffy, pastor of the church, was the officiating clergyman, and Mrs. Ernest Rosado, Amboy, provided organ accompaniment for vocal selections by Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Crawford, Independence, Mo.

Decorations for the ceremony included altar arrangements of white carnations and blue daisies flanked by white tapers.

Satin Gown

For her wedding, the bride chose a floor-length gown of candlelight satin fashioned with an empire bodice featuring an organza yoke edged with hand-made tatted lace created by her grandmother Henrich, a high neckline and long organza sleeves trimmed with Cluny lace. The gown's cathedral train, falling from the waistline, was bordered with scalloped lace, and a Juliet cap of lace and pearls held her fingertip veil of illusion tiers. She wore 100-year-old earrings belonging to her great-grandmother Kramer, and the cascading bouquet she carried combined rosebuds, baby's breath and fern sprays.

Miss Lois Scollie, Lombard, was the bride's maid of honor, and bridal attendants were Miss Sharon Heinlen, Columbia, Mo., and Mrs. Sandra Zippe, Galesburg. They were attired in identical spring-green gowns, and carnations and daisies filled the baskets they carried.

Participating as flower girl and ringbearer were Miss Betsy Bodenhammer, Galesburg, and Mark Truckenbrod, Mendota.

Richard Ernst, Centerville, Ohio, attended his brother as best man, and serving as groomsmen were Stanley Shover and Douglas Fitch, Galesburg.

The ceremony was followed by a reception in the Sublette Community Building when hosts were the bride's uncles and aunts, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Anderson, Norwalk, Conn., and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Henrich, Oklahoma City, Okla. The reception theme, "Bluebirds of Happiness," was carried out in the table decorations including straw wreaths, candles, bluebirds, peacock feathers and nosegays of fresh flowers and lilac leaves. A three-tiered blue and white wedding cake, prepared by Mrs. Helen Rapp, was topped by white satin bells and flowers.

Dollar bill can test leaky refrigerator

Here's a way to use a dollar without spending it!

A dollar bill, is an efficient tool for determining whether the gasket around the inside of your refrigerator door is worn and leaky, and is, therefore, wasting energy and money.

The test is simple. Close the refrigerator door on the dollar bill. If it slides out easily you need a new gasket. The new gasket will cost a bit of money, but you'll still have the dollar bill.

PEO meeting with Mrs. Fries

Mrs. George Fries, 304 Dixon Ave., will entertain Chapter AC, PEO Sisterhood, at 1:45 p.m. Monday, and will be assisted by Mrs. Harold Rorer.

Mrs. W. C. Moser will present the afternoon's program on "About Our Literature."

Assistants

Reception assistants included former Knox College classmates of the bride, Mrs. Monica Polley, Mrs. Kris Brindle, Miss Susan Creviston, Miss Michele McMaster, Miss Martha Gottlieb, Mrs. Alison Peak, Mrs. Judith Brown and her husband, Richard Brown.

The new Mrs. Ernst received a degree in education at Knox College, Galesburg, and she presently teaches first grade in the Silas Willard Elementary School in Galesburg.

Mr. Ernst attended the State University of Buffalo, Buffalo, N.Y., and he received a master's degree in physical education at Western Illinois University, Macomb. He is currently employed in the physical education department of Galesburg High School.

The newlyweds are residing in Galesburg, and at the close of the school year they will make a wedding trip to New York. They will spend the remainder of the summer vacationing in Colorado.

Miss Boehle is engaged to Ronald O'Brien

MISS COLLEEN BOEHLE

The engagement and coming marriage of Miss Colleen Boehle to Ronald O'Brien, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis O'Brien, Dixon, is announced by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Boehle, Dixon.

Both are graduates of Newman Central Catholic High School, Sterling, and Miss Boehle graduated from Mid-state College of Commerce, Peoria. She is employed in the office of the Department of Public Aid, Dixon, and her fiancé is an employee of Northwestern Steel and Wire Company in Sterling.

Marriage vows will be exchanged by the engaged couple June 21 in St. Patrick's Catholic Church.

Few can escape auction fever

By JEAN BARNES

Overheard at a country auction recently: "People are crazy. They would pay $10 for a little box of dirt if someone was bidding against them."

Auction fever is particularly virulent during the spring and summer months, afflicting most collectors at one time or another. And, unless you've been vaccinated by at least one costly mistake you are apt to be a victim.

The "disease" is characterized by a breathless, rapt attention, rapid nodding of the head or jerking of the hand as the bids spiral upward and finally depression or elation, depending upon the verdict of the auctioneer.

We're not fond of auctions, having been vaccinated more than once. Our immunity has now reached a level that we can actually enjoy the process two or three times a year, without a single purchase.

If you are a beginner who would like to buy at auctions we've put together some tips based upon our experience and those of the "professional" status.

Arrive early enough to examine the merchandise carefully. Take a paper and pencil with you so that you can make notes of items which you are interested in.

Note the top bid you are prepared to make on one item. This can serve as a brake on emotional bidding.

Start with a small object which will not draw a great deal of competitive bidding. After a couple of successful ventures with items of little consequence you can then try your hand at more important pieces.

Remember, while the auctioneer controls the sale, you, the bidder, have the right to start and raise the bid at your own discretion.

Offer an auctioneer will ask for a single price bid on identical pieces which must be sold as a lot. So, if you bid $5 on a set of six cups the actual cost would be $30. Be sure you know the terms of the bid before you start.

Boxes of assorted items can be a good buy, particularly if you have had the opportunity to sort through it. But, be careful. We watched a bunch of old postcards being shifted from box to box by interested persons prior to the sale. One bidder bought six boxes of old books to get a large old family Bible, only to discover the Bible had been shifted to another lot. Auctioneers are generally sympathetic about this problem but there are no guarantees.

Leave your timidity at home. Auctions are by nature a competitive exercise. There are many subtleties to the art of bidding which you will eventually master and you will soon develop your own formula for success.

Finally, relax and enjoy yourself. Auction sales can be great fun and often very rewarding.

Bulb plants for spring

Cheery daffodils, which seem to race with their cousin, the shy crocus, and the sassy robin to be the first harbinger of spring, are often the innocent objects of many a home-maker's frustration: their bright yellow is so appealing you want to enjoy them indoors, as well as out, but you hesitate to cut them and deprive your neighbors (and yourself, when you are outside enjoying the brisk spring air) of their beauty.

In the case of bulb plants, you can have your cake and eat it too, says the Society of American Florists, long before that robin makes his first appearance. Hyacinths and bright daffodils will respond gratefully to just a bit of indoor attention by producing a spectacular display of color and aroma—a display you will enjoy for weeks while awaiting the arrival of spring outdoors.

The very nature of flowering bulb plants demands that they be kept in a cool place in your home. They thrive on strong light but do not like direct sunshine and should be turned daily to keep the stems straight. Water them regularly to assure fresh blooms.

When their indoor job is complete, they can be transferred to the garden where, after a well-deserved rest, they will add a touch of color next spring. Or, in the fall, repot them to force them into early bloom by placing the pot in a cool, dark place until the bulbs sprout (about six weeks), then move them to a sunny location and keep them watered. You'll have your own indoor bulb flowers within a few weeks.

Azaleas, available in a stunning array of colors, are perfect blooming houseplants. Adopt several while they are in plentiful supply during the spring months and enjoy their blooms throughout the year.

Mother Nature's annual Spring Spectacular need not be restricted to a few short weeks in your garden. You can bring a bit of that freshness, color and life indoors with flowering and bulb plants before winter skies give way to the promise of spring.

Dear Ann

by Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am expecting my second child in about six weeks and I want to make sure I don't have a third. When I told my doctor I didn't think my nerves could take another pregnancy, he suggested that I have my tubes tied immediately after the delivery.

Before I make up my mind for sure I need to know a little more about it. We hear a lot about vasectomies, but very little about tubal ligations. Are there any psychological side effects?

I guess what really bothers me is if this baby died in infancy or early childhood I would never be able to have another child. I don't want three children, but I'd hate to have only one. What do you suggest? Please don't tell me to discuss it with my husband. He says it's up to me. — Am Bivalent

Dear Biv: This decision must be yours and yours alone. As for the psychological side effects of a tubal ligation, I can't answer that question either because I know nothing about your level of emotional stability. Some women can go to pieces over a hangnail. Others can sail through an amputation with nary a complaint.

It is imperative that you get some outside counsel from someone who knows you personally. I suggest your clergyman or your physician.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a man in my late 50s. I know a widow who has three children. She is about ten years younger. We like each other. This woman is working and makes a nice salary. She also was left some money by her late husband. I am unemployed right now and my financial condition is not good because I'm in a seasonal trade.

Every weekend this woman wants to be taken to dinner and to the theater or to an expensive movie. I cannot afford it and have suggested that she pay her own way. She says, "This is not the American style. If a man can't afford to take out a lady he has no right to invite her."

I am European. Maybe I don't understand the customs in this country. To me it seems like a very selfish, spoiled outlook. Do you believe that the man must always be the total provider, even if the woman has the money and he has not? — N.Y.

Dear N.Y.: If the friendship is new, I believe the man should certainly expect to pay the woman's way. I gather, however, that you two have been seeing each other for quite some time.

Your companion is obviously aware of your financial problems. If she enjoys your company she should be willing to pay her own way. It would be considerate, also, if she cooked a meal for you now and then and purchased a pair of theater tickets.

Dear Ann Landers: My cousin has a 10-year-old daughter who is very much overweight. The relationship between the mother and child is not good. Unfortunately, the mother is a natural beauty and has a beautiful figure.

Last night my husband and I were playing cards with this woman and her brother. (She is divorced.) We heard a loud banging on a door in the back of the house. She explained that she locks her daughter in her room at night so she can't get to the refrigerator. What do you think of this? — Appalled

Dear A.: That unfortunate child needs professional help. Her obesity is probably related to her poor relationship with her mother. Far better to put a lock on the refrigerator door than to make the girl feel like a caged animal.

Brilliant defense thwarts 3 NT

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Ely Culbertson once said that any time he could see all the cards, the Culbertson system would get him to the right contract.

Five clubs would be the right contract for today's hand. South would make it easily by winning the first heart, drawing trumps and knocking out the ace of diamonds.

When this hand appeared in the finals of a regional open pairs no one reached that contract. Those few pairs that did get to game all played in three notrump and most of them wound up making their contract.

It didn't require any great skill on their part. West opened the king of hearts and continued with the queen after South ducked. Then he led a third heart to clear the suit. South would run off six clubs, finally lead a diamond and be home free since East held that ace.

The one South who went down for a nice fat goose egg on the score was the victim of really fine defense. West did open the king of hearts but shifted to a low heart at trick two.

This put East in the lead and East led the four of spades.

South ducked that to West's queen. A spade came back and East was careful to hold back his king so that all South could do was to run with his eight tricks and give up.

Miss Hiatt is honored at shower

AMBOY — Miss Barbara Hiatt, who will exchange marriage vows with Jeff Lowe May 24, was honored at a recent linen shower hosted by the honoree's bridal attendants, Miss Linda Suppiti, Bangkok, Thailand; Mrs. Debra Newton, Batavia, and Miss Sue Lowe.

Miss Suppiti is Miss Hiatt's roommate at the University of Illinois, Champaign, and Mrs. Newton was her roommate when both were attending North Central College, Naperville.

A pink carnation corsage was a gift for the honored guest from her fiancé's grandmother, Mrs. Ernest Harris, Cantril, Iowa, who was unable to attend the shower.

STUFFING

In large saucepan cook ½ cup chopped celery and ¼ cup chopped onion in 2-3rds cup margarine until crisp-tender. Remove from heat. Stir in 1 package (7 oz.) herbed seasoned croutons. Add 1½ cups hot water or broth; stir gently until croutons are evenly and thoroughly moistened. Spoon stuffing into neck and body cavities of turkey.

YIELD: Stuffing for 10 to 14 pound turkey.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you're the one who makes out the family budget this week, chances are there'll be a little surplus after bills are paid.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're up to handling matters that call for firmness and persistence. What you start, you're likely to see through.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't be hesitant today about calling in nearly forgotten IOU's. Your odds of collecting are better than even.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A good day to appraise the project you've been thinking of undertaking. Today you'll reflect upon it in a practical manner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Goals are not likely to elude you today. You have some aces in the hole. You know how to play them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you'll be able to put in some good words for a friend of long-standing. She'll learn of this later and be grateful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Talk over financial matters jointly affecting you and your mate. If your goals are in accord, success is within reach.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A decision you'll have to make may at first appear stern to the casual observer. Events will prove that to be necessary, just and fair.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll go out of your way to be of service to one who is older. Your kind deed will be remembered and later rewarded.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You have an ally who is always there when needed. Again today, she'll do her best to make things pleasant for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll be in the mood to clean up those bothersome little chores you haven't had a chance to get to this week. Get at them!

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today, seek out persons with whom you have ideas in common. Something good will come from your conversations.

People in the news

PARIS (AP) — Exiled Russian author Alexander Solzhenitsyn says a nest of Soviet KGB agents was installed near his Zurich, Switzerland, home and the secret agents are still watching him closely.

Solzhenitsyn, talking with newsmen Thursday about the forthcoming French edition of his latest book, also said German author Heinrich Böll smuggled manuscripts to the West for him and other Soviet writers.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford will speak May 18 to 5,000 graduates at the University of Pennsylvania commencement, the 200th anniversary of the 1775 graduation attended by George Washington and members of the Continental Congress. The White House said Thursday that Ford would receive an honorary degree.

KIEL, Germany (AP) — Franz Josef Strauss, conservative leader of West Germany, says Henry A. Kissinger should give back his Nobel Peace Prize because of the failure of the Vietnam peace talks.

In a campaign speech Thursday, Strauss said it was disheartening to see the peace prize go to the U.S. secretary of state and Le Duc Tho of North Vietnam for something that turned out to be the nucleus of a new war and the "Communist final solution" in Vietnam.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A firm owned by television personality Ed McMahon was on the losing end of a federal court suit.

An 8-member jury awarded $86,000 Thursday to the advertising firm T. Gray Associates, which claimed it had not been paid for work it had done for America on the Move Inc., a touring show that depicted great days in American history. The show was created by McMahon and business partner, Nicholas Torzkeski of Los Angeles.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Billy Graham will preside at memorial services April 16 for the late Chiang Kai-shek of Nationalist China.

Gen. Albert Wedemeyer, commander of U.S. forces in China at the end of World War II, will give a memorial address at the ceremonies in Washington National Cathedral, the Taiwanese disclosed Thursday.

BOSTON (AP) — Actor Yul Brynner bounced his newly adopted Vietnamese daughter on his knee and said, "We are extraordinarily lucky."

The 6-month-old infant, named Melody, arrived in Boston on Wednesday after surviving the crash of an CSA Galaxy transport plane near Saigon last week.

Brynner cuddled the child Thursday as she waited in surprise at the flash of photographers' cameras in the family's suite at a Boston hotel.

"She came out without a scratch or a bruise," he said. "Can you imagine going through an airplane crash and coming out with only a runny nose? That has to be some kind of miracle."

While Brynner held Melody, his other adopted Vietnamese daughter, 1½-year-old Mia, sat on his lap and smiled.

Nature of society, not students reflected in violence, say experts

CHICAGO (AP) — The staggering amount of violence and vandalism in public schools detailed in a Senate report this week reflects the nature of American society more than the nature of students, two child development experts say.

Changes in the type of education offered, as well as other social changes, can help reduce these problems, they said in interviews Thursday.

One of them, Kay Field, director of the teacher education program at the Institute for Psychoanalysis, said the school environment now breeds violence. More respect for the individual needs of students is needed, she added.

The other, Dr. Morris Sklansky, a child analyst and faculty member at the institute, said the young see violence approved in their society in the acceptance of war and the presentation of violence as justifiable and exciting on television and in movies.

A report released Wednesday by a Senate subcommittee on juvenile delinquency noted a "very frightening" increase in vandalism and violence in public schools, including serious physical assaults on teachers and students and more than 100 murders this year.

Mrs. Field said when such violence figures are detailed, there is a tendency to seek a scapegoat in students or in teachers. But, she said, seeking a scapegoat does not solve the problem.

Both students and teachers are victims of the school system, she said. More security guards and police work may be needed to help stem the tide of school crime, she added, but these are stopgap measures which do not solve the basic problem.

"We cannot think in terms of quick solutions or panaceas or severe punishments," she said. "They won't solve the problem."

Violence by children, she said, is a response to a violent society. "It is a means of survival for kids. To say this is not to excuse it, but to face it," Mrs. Field added.

School programs are not geared to the needs of all children, but reflect middle-class values, she pointed out. She cited successful efforts in isolated areas where experimental programs have been able to alter the behavior and improve the education of children deemed delinquent.

Mrs. Field stressed particularly that much smaller classes — no larger than 10 students — are needed so that teachers can provide consistent, individual attention to the children.

This would be costly, she acknowledged, but pointed out that the violence and vandalism bred by the present system are also costly. More individual attention would convey the worth of each child rather than demeaning them and making them feel worthless as the present system does, she said.

The needs of teachers, too, must be recognized so that they are supported and have working conditions in which they can best help the children, she added.

Sklansky said school represents authority to children and they associate this with the punitive, controlling, frustrating authority of their parents, against which they rebel.

We'll start you off with $100,000

That's right, an instant estate of $100,000 at the start of your career. It's made possible by Metropolitan's Decreasing Insurance Whole Life... an exciting insurance plan for young people on the way up. For example, a young male age 25 can set up an initial estate of $100,000 for $40.00 a month! At age 30, $42.00.

Part of the $100,000 is permanent insurance, most is term. At given times some of the term insurance ends and you can replace it with permanent insurance. This increases the premium during the years when you expect your earnings to increase. You can keep the full $100,000 protection and build more cash values for your family and your own future.

Call me for details.

Three SVC faculty members chosen outstanding educators

Three Sauk Valley College faculty members have been chosen outstanding educators of America for 1975 according to SVC President Dr. George E. Cole. Nominated earlier this year, they were selected for this honor on the basis of their professional and civic achievements.

Honored from SVC are: Dr. Fred L. Nesbit, associate professor of social science; Karen Ann Pinter, assistant professor of English and director of the reading center; and Noel F. Adams, counselor.

Outstanding educators of America is an annual awards program honoring distinguished men and women for their outstanding service, achievements, and leadership in the field of education. Each year those chosen outstanding educators are featured in a national awards volume—"Outstanding Educators of America."

Nominations for this program are made by officials of colleges and universities including presidents, deans and department heads. Guidelines for selection include an educator's talents in the classroom, contributions to research, administrative abilities, civic service and professional recognition.

Health planners meet at KSB

The Lee County Health Planning Committee met this week at KSB Hospital.

A grant application for the continuation of a study presently under way, of lead poisoning in children, was presented to the committee. This grant application request is for $149,416. The study is being performed in the Winnebago County area.

Jean Adams, staff member of the Area-wide Planning Agency, reported that their work program for the remainder of 1975 includes the following:

- Development of an Emergency Medical Service Plan;
- Development of a Mental Health Plan;
- Continued analysis of Acute Care Bed Needs within the area;
- Definition of Specialty Care Needs for the area;
- A Nursing Home Study is planned to be initiated in the near future.

The Regional Board of Directors for the Area-wide Planning Agency has spent considerable time in recent months developing bylaws. These bylaws have been approved by the Regional Board and will be forthcoming very soon. All County Committees have representation on this Regional Board. The distribution of the representation will be decided on April 21, when the bylaws committee and the executive committee of the Regional Board meet to discuss this problem.

Kay Bonvouloir, member of the County Committee, reported on the Emergency Medical Services Plan. Surveys have been sent to all ambulance companies and hospitals in the area, to differentiate the type of emergency service they are providing or coming in contact with.

An open meeting has been set for Lee County to discuss the reorganization of the County Committee and the election of new committee members, replacing those having one- and two-year terms. The meeting will be held on May 7 at Loveland Community Building at 8 p.m. All interested county residents are urged to attend.

House okays cut in assessments

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Hoping to avert a court-ordered hike in property taxes throughout the state, the Illinois House has passed legislation lowering the required level of assessment.

The bi-l sent to the Senate Friday would require Illinois counties to assess property at 33 1-3 per cent of full market value instead of the 50 per cent currently required.

Legislative action was stimulated by a suit now pending before the Illinois Supreme Court.

Initiated by a taxpayer in Lake County, this suit asks the court to order state officials to raise assessment levels in every county to 42 per cent, but legal experts have warned that the court might order full compliance with the law.

Because the current state law has not been enforced, counties currently assess property at rates ranging from 18 per cent to 44 per cent.

State officials say this results in unequal taxation and the unfair distribution of state money under programs which take into account local taxing efforts.

However, a court-ordered increase in assessment levels to 42 or 50 per cent would send property taxes skyrocketing in many areas unless local governments, school districts and other taxing bodies acted quickly to lower tax rates.

Passage of the House bill, which would affect 1975 property taxes paid in 1976, would not directly affect the outcome of the pending case in the Supreme Court, since it involves 1974 taxes, sponsors said.

But it was believed the court would take the new law into account and not issue a decision requiring a sharp jump in assessment levels for a single year.

The House measure had the sponsorship of the entire Revenue Committee, although Rep. Jack Beaupre, D-Bourbonnais, was its chief spokesman on the floor.

Beaupre said studies had shown that 33 1-3 per cent was the mean assessment level in Illinois, with half of the state's 102 counties assessing above this level and half below.

He said a key provision of the legislation was a three-year adjustment period included for two reasons:

—To ease the impact on taxpayers in counties assessing below 33 1-3 per cent. Beaupre said assessment levels in those counties would rise to the required level in three stages, giving local governments an opportunity to lower tax rates so that property tax bills would not skyrocket.

—To ease the impact on local governments, schools, park districts and other taxing bodies in counties assessing above 33 1-3 per cent. Beaupre said no taxing body would receive less money than the previous year for three years. Beyond that, he said, it is hoped that inflation will raise property values high enough to compensate for the drop to 33 1-3 per cent assessment levels.

"This bill pleases no one, but we have a dilemma we must address ourselves to," said Rep. Cal Skinner, R-Crystal Lake.

Rep. Roscoe Cunningham, R-Lawrenceville, voted against the measure and reminded his colleagues that many would have "the unpleasant task of explaining this to the voters."

Cunningham said legislators would get blamed for a problem caused by the failure of state officials to enforce the current 50 per cent assessment level.

Enforcement of the law is the responsibility of the Department of Local Government Affairs, which is supposed to raise assessment levels in counties which do not meet the 50 per cent requirement.

The Senate did not hold a floor session Friday, although leaders and staff members were present to introduce bills. With today set as the deadline for bill introduction in both the House and Senate, legislators were working frantically on last-minute legislation.

Both houses were scheduled to be open for the introduction of bills until midnight, although few lawmakers were expected to be present.

In other action Friday, the House:

—Passed a bill allowing the holders of liquor licenses to make political contributions.

—Passed a bill requiring the Illinois Department on Aging to establish an office in every county with a population of 200,000 or more.

—Killed a bill raising the fee for fishing licenses.

Sterling man arrested here

Skeeter E. Cyphers, 27, Sterling, was arrested on warrants issued by Dixon Police Friday, charging him with possession of amphetamines and hypodermic needles and syringes.

Cyphers was brought to the Law Enforcement Center where he was freed on bond and scheduled to appear in court April 29. Further details were unavailable through Dixon Police detectives.

Youth is charged

Dennis P. Johnson, 17, 226 W. Chamberlin St., was arrested by Dixon Police Friday on a charge of possession of liquor as a minor. Johnson was arrested on Dixon High School grounds. He was released on a notice to appear in court on the charge May 1.

Stage set for Rochelle election

ROCHELLE—With sunny weather promised for election day Tuesday, it is hoped that Rochelle's 4,700 registered voters will go to the polls and elect the candidates of their choice.

In the mayoral race, incumbent Street Commissioner Phil W. May is challenging Mayor Bill Cipolla. Cipolla is finishing his second term as mayor and third term as a member of the Rochelle City Council.

Incumbent Finance Commissioner James I. McCaslin, who was appointed to the post 14 months ago, is seeking to be elected finance commissioner. Challenging McCaslin is the only woman candidate, and the third woman candidate ever to seek election in 60 years, Cynthia S. Cronick. Mrs. Cronick is also the youngest candidate on the slate.

Clarence Rasmussen, incumbent Commissioner of Public Health and Safety, in his first term, is being challenged by James E. Renick, seeking to be elected to the post.

M. Page Weeks and Leslie "Bud" Montgomery are both seeking to win the race for the office of street commissioner. Weeks won a place on the April ballot after he had successfully received 745 write-in votes in the primary.

Both candidates for the office of commissioner of public property have served on advisory boards under the incumbent commissioner. L. R. "Tex" Dickenson has been a member of the Rochelle Utility Advisory Board for the past seven years. His opponent, John "Skip" Kenney Jr., has served as a member of the Rochelle Airport Advisory Board.

All Rochelle city precincts will be open from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Persons living in Precinct 1 will vote at the Rochelle City Hall; Precinct 2 voters will go to Central School; Precinct 3, the gymnasium of Lincoln School; Precinct 5, Tilton School; Precinct 6, Presbyterian Church; and persons living in Precinct 7 will vote at the Manning Garage on U.S. 51 south.

Break-in probed

Lee County Sheriff's Deputies are continuing their investigation into a trailer break-in at Woodhaven Lakes.

Owner of the trailer, August Dahlman, called deputies Friday after finding the trailer door had been pried open. Deputies said entry was believed made by cutting a canvas awning which surrounded the door opening.

Taken from the trailer were a radio, valued at $50, and trim from around a skylight. Other contents inside the trailer were ransacked.

Arrested on theft charge

The reported theft of an overhead fuel tank resulted in the arrest Friday of Melvin Rager, 46, Rt. 4, on a charge of theft.

Lee County Sheriff's Deputies arrested Rager at his home. The theft occurred at the Francis Wolf farm, near Ashton, on Sept. 20, 1974.

Rager was released on bond and scheduled to appear in court April 24.

Blaze destroys car engine

ROCHELLE—City firemen were called to Bend Road, west of Rochelle, at 5:40 p.m. Friday when a 1968 Fiat belonging to Jacqueline Dombro, 1011 N. Maine St., Rochelle, caught fire.

A leaking fuel line caused the blaze, which destroyed the car's rear engine.

Nabbed on warrant

A Dixon youth was arrested Friday by Lee County Sheriff's Deputies on a Stephenson County warrant. Kenneth Babaiian, 19, N. Galena Ave., was charged with theft in the warrant. He was released on bond and scheduled to appear in court at a later date.

Charged with contributing

Robert Lewis, 18, Mendota was arrested Friday by Lee County Sheriff's Deputies on a warrant charging him with four counts of contributing to the delinquency of minors.

Lewis was arrested at his home by deputies. He was released on bond.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our sincere appreciation to our many friends for their numerous cards, congratulations & gifts on our Golden Wedding Anniversary. Our deep gratitude we extend especially to Mr. & Mrs. Sam Morris who were hosts for our reception and entertained at a dinner in our behalf. Thank you to all.

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE
CASE D-630: Natty Bo, aged 3½, is one of our 16 grandchildren.

His daddy is a Dental Surgeon living about 35 miles west of our summer farm home.

"Bo," he said, "do you want to go with me to visit Grandma and Grandpa?"

Natty Bo eagerly assented, bit as they were driving eastward, he asked:

"Where are God and Jesus?"

"Oh, they are way up in the sky," his daddy replied.

"But I can't see them!" Natty Bo protested.

"No, they are too far away," his daddy answered, "but they can see you and me, even though we can't see them."

Natty Bo mulled this over for a few moments.

Then he waved his hand toward the sky, exclaiming:

"Hi, God and Jesus! We're going to Indiana. So come down and play with me there."

Hoosier Paradise

He apparently regards our Indiana farm as a paradise on earth, for he enjoys far more freedom to romp and play outdoors when he visits us.

Besides, we have a one-acre pond so he can boat, fish and swim therein.

And often his cousins will join him at our home, so this is a gala spot for youngsters.

But please note the usual tendency of children to personalize God.

Adults also do the same, for this idea that God is merely a spirit, is unreal and illogical.

"God is Truth," many philosophical clergymen will intone.

But so is gravity, as well as the multiplication tables!

Yet gravity doesn't heed our prayers or create an Adam and Eve!

Nor does an axiom of geometry send a Messiah to this Earth!

So it is folly to de-personalize Deity when toddlers already have the right idea.

"Out of the mouth of babes proceedeth wisdom," the Bible says.

"But, Dr. Crane," you may inquire, "do you really think God is at a fixed spot in the universe and has a human form?"

Yes, indeed, I do! For the Bible tells us that God made man in God's own image!

And an image is not a mere diffuse "spirit" or a "truth" such as gravity or the multiplication tables.

"But, Dr. Crane," young people have asked, "how can God be a specific person, yet also be everywhere?"

To which I reply:

"A TV or Radio Station is a specific, tangible thing, but its 'spirit' can be everywhere and available to each of us by the 'tune in' by the correct dial number!"

The sun is also a fixed body at the center of our solar system, yet its beneficent "spirit"

(warmth and light) are everywhere.

Thus, the ancient peoples didn't worship merely its pervasive heat but realized that such warmth came from a definite spot, so they bowed down to the sun deity.

Brilliant Romans also personalized Zeus.

Where two or three are gathered together in my name," Jesus likewise promised, "there will I be in the midst of them."

And "His Name" is the cosmic dial setting by which we can tune-in on Deity.

But He is a person, sitting at God's right hand!

At death, we probably travel to Heaven via the fastest speed in this universe, namely, thought waves and then recry-tallize into new bodies!

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Friday, April 11, the 102nd day of 1975. There are 263 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: In 1961, the Soviet Union became the first nation to put a man in space. Cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin made a safe landing after one orbit of the earth.

On this date — In 1654, Ireland and Scotland were united with England.

In 1861, the American Civil War began as Confederate forces took Fort Sumter at Charleston, S. C. from Federal troops.

In 1916, American soldiers under General John Pershing were fighting in Mexico against forces led by Pancho Villa.

In 1945, President Franklin Roosevelt died, and Harry Truman was sworn in as the 33rd President.

In 1963, Indonesian forces attacked Malaysia.

In 1966, U.S. bombers carried out their first strikes against North Vietnam.

Ten years ago: Serious flooding was beginning along the Mississippi River.

Walker faces another decision on elderly

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — For the second time in five months, Gov. Daniel Walker is faced with the decision of whether to approve a plan to give state money to Illinois senior citizens.

The General Assembly Thursday completed action on the legislation, which would make annual cash grants ranging from $50 to $99.90 to persons earning less than $10,000 a year if they are 65 or older or handicapped.

Walker vetoed a similar bill earlier this year because he said the state could not afford it.

An appropriation of $34 million was included in the legislation passed Thursday, the same amount Walker vetoed.

Nevertheless, the House sponsor, Rep. Gerald Shea, D-Riverside, told reporters: "I think the bill is in such shape that the governor can sign it."

The House passed the bill unanimously Thursday morning. The Senate, which had passed the measure earlier, then voted 47 to 2 to accept some changes the House made in the Senate version.

Lt. Gov. Neil Hartigan, who with a coalition of senior citizens groups has been a chief backer of tax relief for the elderly, said the bill "is a step toward survival with dignity at a time of deepening deprivation."

Revenue Department officials have said $34 million would be spent only if every qualified person applied. That never has happened under existing property tax relief programs using the same basic criteria for eligibility.

Walker has 60 days from the time he receives the bill to sign it or veto it. If he does neither, the bill automatically becomes law.

Besides the cash grant plan, the bill makes a change in the existing circuit breaker tax relief program. That change, to increase slightly grants paid to elderly persons renting homes, would become effective next

Jan. 1, retroactive to the 1974 tax year.

Both houses have adopted a deadline of this Saturday for introduction of bills, and measures have been flowing into the hopper at a hectic pace.

On Thursday, there were 213 bills introduced in the Senate and 281 in the House. This brings to nearly 3,000 the total number introduced since the session began in January.

The House will meet in formal session today. The Senate has scheduled several sessions, including one at 11:30 p.m. Saturday, for introduction of bills. Senators are not required to be present.

Meanwhile, the House passed and sent to the Senate two bills changing state laws on rape. One would require hospitals to furnish emergency treatment to rape victims and authorize the Department of Public Health to reimburse hospitals for treatment of public aid recipients and others who cannot afford such services.

The other measure expands the definition of rape to include, among other things, sexual relations under threat or intimidation.

In other legislative action: —The Senate passed and sent to the House legislation which would permit currency exchanges to sell lottery tickets.

—The House Executive Committee approved a bill which would permit local government officials to have an interest in contracts with a local government unit. Present law prohibits such an interest. —A bill was introduced in the House which would remove all criminal penalties for the private use of marijuana.

—The House Motor Vehicles Committee voted down a bill which would have required the state to issue license plates lasting five years, updated yearly with small stickers. Currently, the state issues license plates annually.

—A measure which would give county residents a seven-day head start over other state residents on purchase of deer hunting permits failed at the final passage stage in the Senate.

Garrison out of limelight

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — Former Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison has a new role as a hot defense lawyer, which he says pays better but is less engrossing than trying to reshape assassination history.

"It's a lot easier," says the survivor of 12 often hectic years as district attorney and a political power in New Orleans.

For seven of those years, Garrison labored on what he said was a new version of how President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in a motorcade in Dallas in 1963.

When Garrison began his investigation in 1967, it became for a short time a world sensation. Then it ran afoul of criticism that his theory had few facts to support it.

"I wrote my book on the assassination and said what I had to say and showed the role of New Orleans," he said. "Some people don't believe it; there are none so blind as those who will not see."

Political tides washed Garrison out of office last year, ending his effort — officially, at least — to prove that a widespread assassination conspiracy was involved.

The ghost of the investigation now looms in the form of a $5 million damage suit filed by Clay L. Shaw, acquitted in 1969 on charges he conspired with Lee Harvey Oswald to murder the president.

Shaw's U.S. District Court suit here contends the investigation violated his constitutional rights. Shaw died of cancer last August and under Louisiana law a damage suit dies with the plaintiff. But, U.S. District Court Judge Frederick Heebe ruled otherwise.

"Shaw surely deserves an opportunity to have his day in court and attempt to clear his name, if only posthumously," Heebe ruled.

Asked if he intended to appeal, Garrison reacted with his customary insouciance.

"I am going to let the other people worry about that," he said. "Far as I am concerned, I'd just as soon go to trial. If I can't go in and win it with my left hand, then I'm not a lawyer."

WHERE TO NOW?—Two unemployed Chrysler workers enter the plant in Hamtramck, Mich., to validate their Supplemental Unemployment Benefit claim. Chrysler announced it will stop making the supplemental payments because the cash reserves of the fund have been depleted by the massive and prolonged layoffs. (AP Wirephoto)

There was a time that remark would have drawn knowing grins. Garrison rarely appeared in court while district attorney, raising doubts about his courtroom prowess. But the just expired when he took over his own defense at his 1973 federal court trial on a charge of taking bribes — and won.

Despite the verdict of innocent, the trial was a strong factor in Garrison's political weakness in the election two months later.

After the bribery case he won a succession of court fights.

CHICAGO (AP) — The U.S. Commerce Department's top economist says that the nation's unemployment rate may surpass 9 per cent this year.

But Asst. Commerce Secretary James L. Pate said Thursday that the U.S. economy probably will begin to recover from its recession during the second half of 1975.

Pate made his prediction of unemployment, the highest yet by an administration official, in a speech to the Conference Board in Chicago, a business organization for economic research and study. Treasury Secretary William E. Simon predicted last week that the jobless rate would reach 9 per cent. The rate was reported at 8.7 per cent last month.

"With respect to unemployment, it appears almost certain that the unemployment rate will move higher — peaking at over 9 per cent," Pate said. "And, given the forecast of only a moderate recovery in output during the second half of 1975, the unemployment rate will probably not decline appreciably until late in 1975."

Pate also said he believes that the Gross National Product, the total output of goods and services, may have declined 10 per cent over the first three months of this year. The figures will be released April 17 by the Commerce Department.

Still, Pate said, "We are seeing signs that the recent sharp economic decline is moderating and ... a recovery in overall economic activity in the second half of 1975 is now assured."

Pate added, "I do not mean to suggest that the outlook has all suddenly turned rosy. In fact, there is a considerable amount of unfavorable economic data still to be reported."

Is Nicklaus ready to bomb foes at Masters tourney?

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus has another date with destiny today at Augusta National, and the question is: Will anybody show up for the party. "I'm gonna stay," vowed Lee Trevino.

"It's not over yet," warned defending champion Gary Player.

"He might be 20 under par by Sunday," said the more realistic Bobby Nichols, with resignation.

The Masters Golf Tournament braced for another runaway—reminiscent of Nicklaus' nine-stroke rout with a record 271 in 1965—as the big guy with the shock of golden hair and penchant for birdies in clusters carries a five-stroke lead into the climactic 36 holes.

To most observers, the show is over.

But the articulate, golf-wise Nicklaus, although he admits he is playing perhaps the best golf of his glittering career, is declining to gloat.

"It is hard to hold a lead on this course," he told reporters after posting a second round 67 for a 36-hole total of 135. "I have been to Augusta many times. I have seen many things happen.

"I have had five shots in the lead before and lost them. It is hard to hold a lead on this course, especially on the back nine where there is so much water."

If Nicklaus is to be caught, who is there in the dazed field capable of doing it?

Arnold Palmer, who like Nicklaus has won four Masters, is back there at 140, a struggling man of 45. There is the portly Billy Casper, 43, on a comeback binge, and 25-year-old Tom Watson. They are at 140 also—closest to the berserk pace-setter.

Another stroke back at 141—six in arrears—are Lee Trevino, Tom Weiskopf, Bobby Nichols, Romero Blancas, J. C. Snead and longshot Pat Fitzsimons. The nine closest chasers have 17 major championships among them.

But Nicklaus has a cache of 14, an all-time record, and his sights are on No. 15 which could pull the trigger on a Grand Slam, a sweep of the Masters, U. S. and British Opens and the PGA in a single year.

South Africa's Player can be counted out of it, 11 shots back at 146 after a distressing 74. So can Johnny Miller, the new wonder boy from Northern California, 1974 Golfer of the Year and Winter Tour sensation, who rallied slightly but found himself also at 146.

The tournament also said good-bye to Lee Elder, whose bid as the Masters' first black came apart with a scrambling 78 for 152 which failed to make the cut.

"Well, you got rid of me," Elder said in good spirit. "I did myself in. Today I was all over the place. I really did the beautification bit, I saw all the flowers and trees."

So, until someone says otherwise, this is Jack Nicklaus' show the rest of the way, and the game probably has never had a more poised and complete champion.

His sun-bleached hair hanging loosely over his eyes, Nicklaus sat before a jammed roomful of golf historians and assessed his growing dominance of the game with the meticulousness that characterizes his play.

"Jack," an Australian reporter said, "recalling the 1960s when you and Arnold Palmer were battling it out head to head, does it disturb you to see that Palmer is one of those closest behind you."

Nicklaus hesitated.

"Not really," he said. "This is 1970."

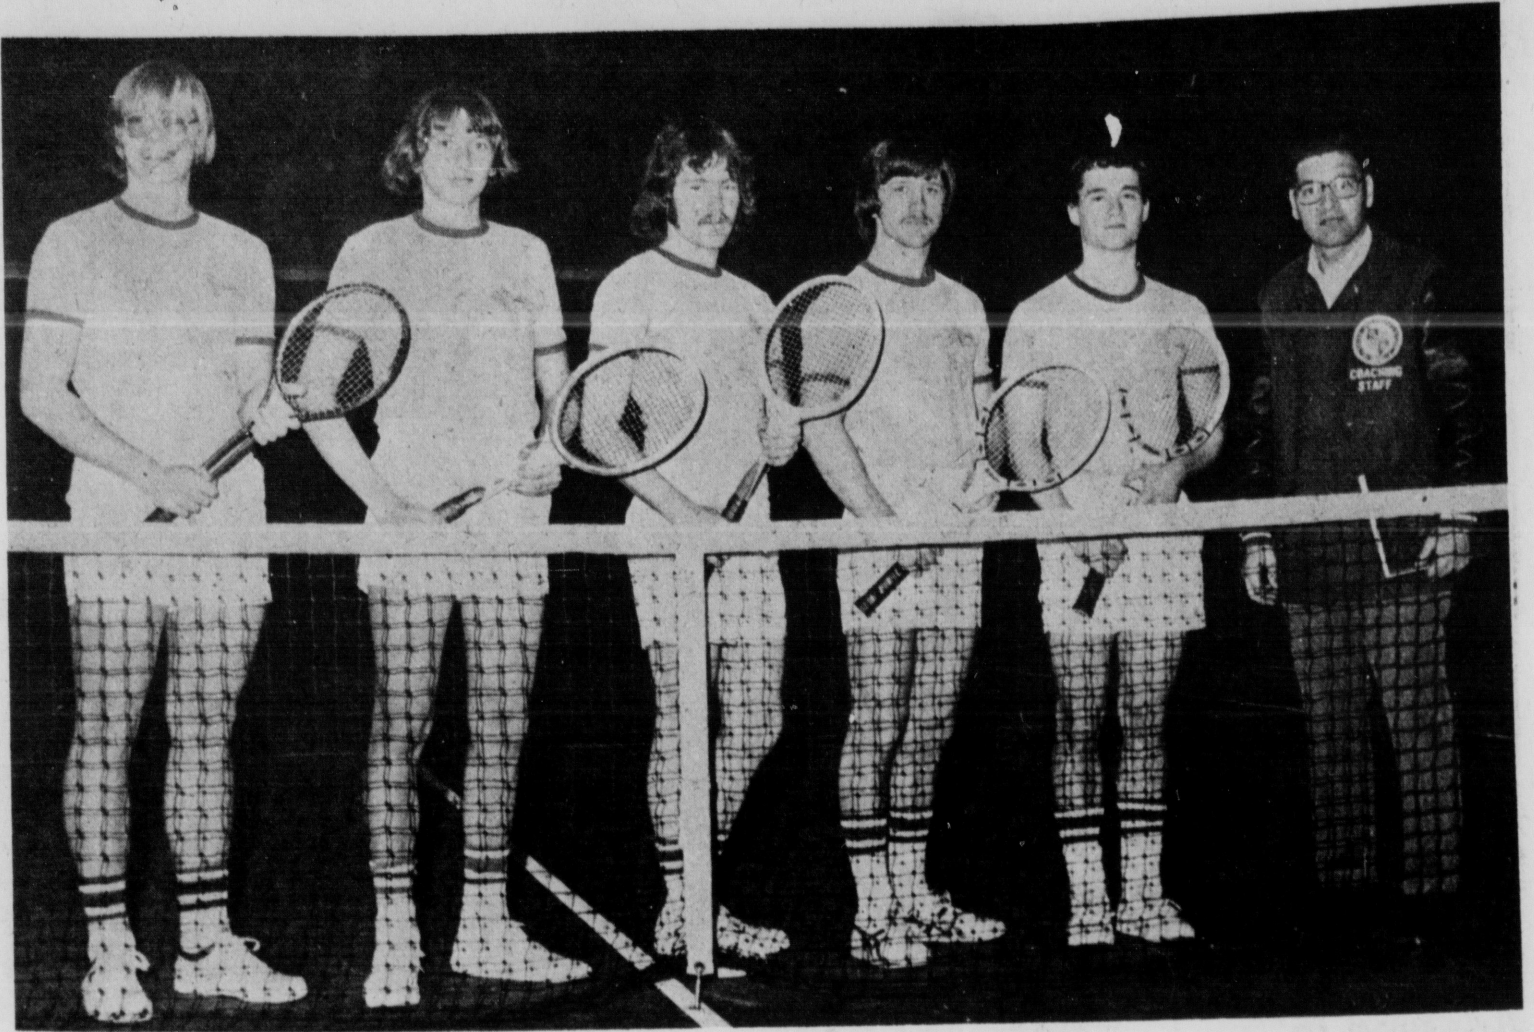

Asked to compare his present form with that of 1965 when he set the tournament record of 271 Nicklaus replied:

"I think I am a better player than I was in 1965. Whether I play that well in the remaining two rounds remains to be seen."

He refused to concede that he is at the peak of his game. "I am playing as well as ever in my life but there have been times when I had more brilliant streaks," he added.

Palmer led the tournament briefly when he went to five-under-par at the seventh hole but he fell victim to the treacherous Amen Corner—11th through the 14th, bogeying two and knocking his approach in the ditch at the long 13th.

"It was a scrambling round for me," Arnie said, "and I got away with it. It's still too early to analyze anybody's chances."

Sports Notes

McCaffrey letters

Tim McCaffrey, son of Mrs. Helen McCaffrey of Amboy, was awarded a varsity letter in basketball at Lincoln Trail Junior College in Robinson. McCaffrey, a 5'10" point guard, led the Statesmen in assists and was named the winner of the "Guts" award for outstanding defensive play.

Lincoln Trail compiled an 18-11 overall record and was ranked as high as fourth in Illinois junior college polls this past season. McCaffrey was a three-year regular for the Amboy Clippers and was the Most Valuable Player for the 1974 season.

IHSA Board sets policy

BLOOMINGTON—The Board of Directors of the Illinois High School Association (IHSA) has taken action to guarantee the successful continued growth in the Association's girls athletic activities by exercising its responsibility to conduct state tournament series for members of the sex for which the series is designed.

At its most recent meeting, the Board passed the following resolution: "Effective immediately, all IHSA-sponsored athletic state meets and tournaments designed and conducted for boys shall be limited to participation by boys; all IHSA-sponsored athletic state meets and tournaments designed and conducted for girls shall be limited to participation by girls."

Within two years, a total of 12 state tournament series will be conducted for girls in Illinois, while there currently is a total of 11 for boys.

Rules governing all IHSA-sponsored state meets and tournaments (including those in Boys Track and Field, Girls Track and Field, Boys Baseball and Boys Tennis this spring) will stipulate that the activity is limited to participation by the students of the sex for which it is designed.

In making the decision, the Board reiterated the Association's philosophy that the provision of separate but comparable opportunities for participation in interscholastic athletics is in the best interests of both boys and girls.

Rationale for taking the action included:

- 1) The opportunity to participate in athletic state meets and tournaments is a privilege which the Association is attempting to extend to both boys and girls in its member high schools on an equitable basis;
- 2) Sports in which IHSA state meets and tournaments are offered for boys and girls may in some cases be different because of differences in the interests and needs of the boys and girls in member schools;
- 3) Sex is a justifiable classification for any IHSA-sponsored athletic competition, since boys as a class have a decided physiological advantage over girls as a class when they compete against girls in virtually every sport;
- 4) The IHSA can best achieve the goal of providing equal opportunity for both boys and girls to participate in athletic state tournaments and meets by restricting participation to the sex for which that activity is designed.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Henry Aaron says it's a thrill to be back in Milwaukee, but he had nothing on more than 48,000 other idol-worshippers who Friday joyously ended their 10-year separation with the Beer-town Bambino.

Hammerin' Hank, who hit more than half of his major league record 733 home runs performing for the Milwaukee Braves, marched off to Atlanta when the Braves left in 1966.

But he marched back last November when Atlanta traded him home to the Brewers, and since then fans eagerly awaited for Friday's home-season opener the way a desert traveler lusts for water.

His team's symbol is a beer keg instead of an Indian warrior. He runs to the clubhouse to keep warm between innings, and he wears a streamlined knit uniform that doesn't quite hide his advancing paunch.

There was nobody named Adcock, Burdette, Spahn or Mathews on the field with Aaron, just a bunch of guys named Scott, Briggs, Money, Coluccio, Lezcano, Yount and Garcia—some of whom weren't even born when Aaron first put on a uniform and walked out of the County Stadium dugout.

But the cap still has a big "M" on the front, there's no mistaking that swing, and even if he is 41 years old, Aaron's wrists still perform as if they were created just to propel a baseball bat in an arc a little more powerful than anyone else's.

Dressed in winter coats, hats, scarves, mittens and gloves for the 37-degree weather, the fans sang "Hello Henry" to the tune of "Hello Dolly," and stood and cheered for nearly two minutes when No. 44 finally walked out on the County Stadium field.

Powerful Pirates turn to singles

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

The Pittsburgh Pirates, who normally travel on the long ball express, took a dozen short trips against the New York Mets and still got where they wanted to go.

The powerful Pirate bats were coming up a little short Friday. They scratched out 12 hits—all singles—but if they didn't belt the Mets into submission, at least they pawed them to death.

"We'll get our share of home runs here," said Pittsburgh Manager Danny Murtaugh after the Pirates scored a subtle 4-3 victory over the Mets. "Give it some time."

Elsewhere in the National League, the Chicago Cubs edged the Montreal Expos 2-1; the Atlanta Braves beat the San Francisco Giants 4-2; the St. Louis Cardinals downed the Philadelphia Phillies 6-3; the Los Angeles Dodgers blanked the Houston Astros 7-0, and the San Diego Padres dumped the Cincinnati Reds 5-2.

The Pirates shortened the fences at Three Rivers stadium during the off-season, but the only beneficiaries on Friday were the Mets, who carried a 3-0 lead into the ninth inning on solo homers by Dave Kingman and Del Unser and a run-scoring double by Joe Torre.

Pittsburgh, in its home opener, was held to seven singles by Jerry Koosman until the ninth. Consecutive singles by Richie Zisk, Dave Parker and Manny Sanguillen knocked in one run and chased Koosman.

Rookie reliever Rick Baldwin, making his first major league appearance, then walked pinch-hitter Paul Popovich to load the bases. One out later, Rennie Stennett singled up a middle to tie the score.

Mac Searce replaced Baldwin and Richie Hebner knocked one of his tosses into short left field, scoring Popovich from second with the winning run.

Cubs 2, Expos 1
Pete Lacock's long fly ball was supposed to move the runner up a base. It got the job done and more for the Cubs.

Rick Monday singled in the eighth and was safe at second on an infield error. Lacock followed with a deep drive to right field, long enough for Monday to take third. But when Carter fell down after making the grab, Monday steamed home for the winning run against the Expos.

"It was just one of those things," said Carter. "I was going backward, but the ball carried and I had to keep going back quicker and my momentum caused me to fall down."

Monday never saw Carter's

Complete turnabout by Esposito

BOSTON (AP) — Just a few days ago, Chicago Black Hawks goalie Tony Esposito was humiliated—virtually shelled from his net.

He was beaten for seven goals and replaced early in the third period as the Boston Bruins rolled to an 8-2 victory in the opening game of a best-of-three Stanley Cup playoff series.

But Esposito was tremendous Thursday night as the Hawks rebounded for a 5-4 overtime victory. And with the chips on the line in the rubber game, he was super spectacular Friday night, making 52 saves in a 6-4 victory which advanced the Hawks to the National Hockey League playoff quarter-finals.

"You come to expect it of Tony," said Chicago Coach Billy Reay in praising the former Vezina Trophy winner. "If you don't get it, you're a little disappointed."

Phil Esposito, the Bruins' high-scoring center, said he thought his younger brother looked sick, underweight and tired after Boston's Tuesday rout—and Tony won't let him forget it.

"I'm going to tell him all summer that I feel lousy," Tony said. "This time of the year everyone is tired. You just have to keep going. It was tough tonight. All the marbles were on the line. In about an hour, I'll feel tired, but I'm not going to worry tonight. Tomorrow we'll start all over again."

"When we won 8-2, we thought the series was over," Boston Coach Don Cherry said after the windup of his first year in the NHL. "As you can see, it wasn't. Their goalie played a great game."

Although the Hawks were outshot 56-19 by the Bruins,

Catfish falters in initial Yankee start

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Catfish Hunter falters in his debut as a New York Yankee, but another star, Hank Aaron, shone brightly in his return to Milwaukee.

Hunter, once baseball's most celebrated free agent, took the mound for the first time in a Yankee uniform in New York's home opener Friday, but got cuffed for home runs by Detroit's Willie Horton and Nate Colbert and the Tigers spoiled his premiere, 5-3.

Meanwhile, Aaron returned to Milwaukee, where he started it all 21 years and 733 home runs ago, and contributed a hit and a run batted in to the Brewers' 6-2 triumph over the Cleveland Indians.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Boston Red Sox edged the Baltimore Orioles 6-5 in 12 innings, the Kansas City Royals beat the Minnesota Twins 8-3, the Oakland A's defeated the Texas Rangers 7-5 and the California Angels blanked the Chicago White Sox 5-0.

Hunter found the spotlight a bit too bright. But it has followed him since he signed his reported $3.75-million contract on New Year's Eve.

"It seemed like a World Series," he said, after dealing with a barrage of media people. "I never saw this many writers in Oakland, even during the World Series. And the crowds here are more alive than the ones in Oakland. There you get the same people every day; you can close your eyes and tell where they're sitting."

Despite pitching in seven World Series games and four All-Star contests, the jitters of the debut got to Hunter. "I was a little nervous out there," he conceded. "I was pressing a bit too much."

It didn't take long for the Tigers to jump on the jittery Hunter. The third man up in the first inning was Horton, who cracked a two-run homer to left. Then, after the Yankees had scored three runs in the bottom of the first, Colbert blasted a single in the sixth and came up in the sixth inning and blasted a three-run shot to left for the victory.

"They're not hitting any maiden when they hit a home run off me," said Hunter, who was tagged for 25 homers while winning 25 games for Oakland last year. "I've heard the ball doesn't travel here, but I proved that wrong."

Mickey Lolich got the victory for the Tigers, with some spectacular relief from John Hiller, who bailed Lolich out of a bases-loaded, none-out jam in the seventh and then finished up.

Hunter, meanwhile, asked that the 26,212 who turned out to see the new star in town bear with him.

"I'll be more relaxed next time," he promised.

Brewers 6, Indians 2

A crowd of 48,160 came out for Henry Aaron's return to Milwaukee, and greeted the home run king with prolonged standing ovations during pregame ceremonies.

Aaron drove in the Brewers' initial run in the third inning by bouncing into a force play, then cracked a single in the midst of a five-run Brewer rally in the sixth. Pedro Garcia slammed a two-run double and John Briggs a solo homer in that outburst.

Like Hunter, Aaron said he'll be happy once the media spotlight is turned off, or at least dimmed.

"I just want to get down to baseball," he said.

Red Sox 6, Orioles 5

Carl Yastrzemski's 12th-inning homer was the game-winner, but Tony Conigliaro's sixth-inning blast was the one which drew the most attention in the Boston clubhouse.

"You go too long without hitting a home run, you start thinking about it," said Tony C. who is returning to baseball after an enforced 3 1/2-year absence due to recurring vision problems. "Then you really go into a slump. So I was happy to get it today."

Angels 5, White Sox 0

Nolan Ryan blanked Chicago on six singles and California ruined Claude Osteen's return to the American League by defeating the White Sox.

Ryan, who has permitted only nine hits in winning his first two starts of the season, struck out 10 and walked four

OCCO AGRI-NUTRIENTS Positions Open

+District Sales Manager for Lee, Ogle and Winnebago Counties.

+Salesmen to sell feeds and crop preservatives direct to farmers.

OCCO's sales force is backed by 63 years experience in meeting farmers needs for products that give them the highest return for their feed dollar. Also our crop preservatives retain the feed value of high moisture hay and grain without the use of expensive storage facilities. A farm background and some sales experience will be helpful to the successful applicants for these positions.

For more information call District Sales Manager (608) 568-3301 or write Division two OCCO Feeds, Oelwein, Iowa 50662. A few farmer-distributorships are available in this area. Ask about them.

Drastic changes in primary elections being weighed

By SKIP WOLLENBERG
Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Drastic revisions in state laws affecting voter eligibility in primary elections are being considered by the Illinois General Assembly.

The proposals pit staunch party loyalists—notably Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley and his supporters—against independents.

Currently, voters in primaries declare their political preference on election day. The measure Daley's supporters are backing is one sponsored by Sen. John Nimrod, a Republican committeeman from Skokie.

Nimrod and Daley belong to different political parties but their goal is the same—to have registered Democrats pick Democratic candidates and only registered Republicans select GOP candidates.

The Nimrod proposal for a so-called "closed primary" would require voters to register their party affiliation before the date on which candidates submit nominating petitions for primary ballot spots.

"We do happen to have a party system in Illinois, so the party ought to have the right to select its own candidates and delegates who are responsible to the party platform," said Nimrod. "I don't believe independents should make that decision for either party."

The other proposal, which has been introduced in the House by Rep. George Sangmeister, D-Mokena, would allow persons to vote in primary elections without disclosing their party affiliation.

Rep. Celeste Stiehl, R-Belle-ville, a GOP assistant leader, said she thinks adoption of Sangmeister's so-called "open primary" proposal would have "the salutary effect of encouraging more people to exercise their right to vote in the vital primary election."

"Many people are reluctant to publicly state their party preference because they feel it...violates the principle of secret ballot."

The legislature is not heading into its consideration of the two proposals without preparation.

Two legislative committees in the last year have looked at Illinois' primary laws after the U.S. Supreme Court wiped out the law banning party switching 23 months after a person voted in a primary.

Nimrod headed a subcommittee investigation last year "to review and evaluate" existing primary laws, and among other things, the subcommittee studied his bill.

At the time, Nimrod's bill required voters to register their party affiliation four months before primary elections and one month before candidates filed their nominating petitions.

"The general sentiment of the vast majority of the witnesses was in favor of legislation to require previous party enrollment before participation in the primary election," the Nimrod subcommittee reported. "It was generally conceded that requiring party enrollment would probably decrease voter participation in the primary process; however, it was added that this decrease was warranted if the participants were not willing to declare their political affiliation."

Among those who testified before the subcommittee was Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley and an array of loyalists.

Nimrod said his bill this session incorporates the best of the suggestions made to his subcommittee.

A House committee was also asked last year to consider whether Illinois laws should be changed "to make it possible for qualified voters to vote in a primary election without disclosing their party affiliation."

The committee issued its report in December 1974, and said time limitations on study of data precluded any concrete recommendations.

The committee offered no conclusions and presented the arguments it detected after conducting outside research and a hearing.

One finding: "The testimony...indicated that many voters don't care about the potential impact of an open primary on political parties. They want to participate in primary elections, and they don't understand why, in order to do so, they must declare their party politics."

The committee conducted a survey of the four most recent gubernatorial primaries in nine states in which voters had to declare their party affiliation and in nine corresponding states in which voters did not. "The survey indicates that voter participation in open primaries is slightly higher than in closed primaries, but it is questionable whether the difference has statistical meaning...The average turnout in the open primaries was 31 per cent; the closed primaries averaged 28.6 per cent," the report said.

The backers of the two proposals on primary election eligibility draw a more explicit distinction.

"If you want to be an independent, why should you have the right to select the party candidate?" asks Nimrod. "What you want to do in that situation is to be an independent and be a party member too."

"Nimrod's proposal gives the party bosses a stranglehold on who will be the party's nominees," said Rep. Joseph Lundy, of Evanston, an independent Democrat. "The proposal to close up the primary elections is foreign to our whole political system."
